General Market Commentary

Global equities rebounded strongly in Q2 as countries started to ease lockdown measures. Corporate bonds rallied globally, outperforming government bonds, as risk appetite returned to markets. Movements in government bond yields were less pronounced, ending the period generally flat or slightly lower. The UK 2-year yield fell below zero for the first time, provoking discussion on the potential impacts of negative rates.

The Bank of England announced an expansion to the quantitative easing programme, while the government outlined steps to end the furlough scheme in October. The end of the transition period for Brexit remains unchanged at 31st December 2020. US equities performed strongest, supported by a loose monetary policy from the Federal Reserve and signs of economic recovery. However, Covid-19 cases continued to surge in the US through to the end of June, making the US the worst affected nation. Oil prices recovered from lows as OPEC agreed to production cuts.
