

CONTRACTING In The Current Market

Candidates and hiring managers alike have misconceptions about contract jobs. Others have made a very successful career and team through contracting. What advantage does it offer you? Why has contracting become so prevalent? And most importantly, is it the best option for you?

MOTION RECRUITMENT

Top Jobs are Available Now Through Contracting

As businesses recover from COVID-19's impact, contracting can keep you working, offer opportunities to upskill and get your foot in the door at competitive companies. With so much uncertainty, not all companies can hire full-time but many can offer contract or contract-to-hire roles with quick start dates.

🔗 READ: Is contracting the career change you need?

🔗 EXAMINE: Debunking Contractor Misconceptions

Get All the Benefits - Even with a Contract Role

As an employee, you're entitled to benefits. Our contractors partner with us to achieve long-term career goals, get competitive benefits and work with top companies. Contracting offers perks like networking with hiring managers, project-based work where you can gain new technical skills and testing out a company for fit.

🔗 DISCOVER: Why you can make more as a contractor

🔗 LEARN: 3 top wins of becoming a contractor

Start a Contract Role, Quickly

With a shorter interview process and companies moving toward contracting as a solution in the current climate, unique and career-elevating opportunities are available as contract roles. If you're open to a contract role, opportunities are available for you now.

🔗 FIND: Tech Contract Job Openings You Can Apply To Now

🔗 ASK: These 6 Questions Before Saying Yes to a Contract Role

