Todd Baylis, CEO Bio

Todd Baylis is the CEO and Co-Founder of Qgiv, a digital fundraising platform that provides thoughtfully-designed, user-friendly fundraising software to some pretty great people at more than 5,000 organizations in the United States and Canada. Todd co-founded Qgiv in 2007 with the goal of making it easy for nonprofit, faith-based, and political organizations to accept online donations and payments. Qgiv is committed to helping nonprofits raise more by anticipating and addressing their needs and challenges through customer-led development and close attention to industry best practices.

In addition to his leadership of Qgiv, Todd serves on a number of boards and advisory councils, contributing his vision and experience wherever possible. He currently serves as Vice Chair for the Lakeland Area Economic Development Council, as a Director for the Florida Polytechnic University Foundation and as a Director for the Imperial Symphony Orchestra.

Todd learned to program at the age of thirteen at computer camp (“100% normal teenage activity,” he says.) and earned his MS in IT Management from Carnegie Mellon University, and received his BS in Computer and Information Sciences from Florida State University.
